Dear Mr. Colby:

I am writing to invite you to nominate senior officials in your organization to participate in the Institution's educational conferences during fiscal year 1974. These activities are a continuation of programs which Brookings has conducted for over fifteen years to assist government officials to discharge their responsibilities more effectively.

Several series of programs will be offered during 1974. The Conferences for Management and Program Executives offer opportunities for senior officials to strengthen their leadership abilities through intensive analysis and discussion of important issues in domestic and foreign policy. In view of the growing emphasis on expanding the responsibilities of state and local governments, these conferences will also be offered to selected state and local government executives.

The Conferences on Business in Contemporary Society are designed to increase the Federal executive's understanding of business management, operations, and the role of the corporation in American society. The Conferences for Science Executives bring together senior scientists from a wide variety of backgrounds to consider broad questions of the relationships of science and technology to public policy.

Information about each program is contained in the enclosed brochure -- including sample programs for each series, eligibility requirements and fees. Fees do not meet the entire cost of these programs and Brookings will continue to provide the necessary subsidy from its own funds.

We hope that a sizable number of your senior executives will participate in the 1974 programs. We will appreciate receiving your nominations by August 15, 1973.

Sincerely,

Kermit Gordon
President
